Jeremy Ochsenbein is Of Counsel in the Denver office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. He is a member of the firm's Litigation Department as well as its Government Contracts Practice Group, Environmental Litigation and Mass Tort Practice Group, Law Firm Defense Practice Group, Labor and Employment Practice Group, and the White Collar Defense and Investigations Practice Group. Prior to joining the Denver office, Jeremy worked in the firm's Los Angeles office.

Jeremy has significant experience preparing dispositive motions and handling complex discovery and motion practice in state and federal courts. He has assisted clients with federal and California False Claims Act and whistleblower claims, with particular focus on qui tam actions filed against educational institutions. Additionally, Jeremy has defended clients in a range of environmental matters. He also has significant experience representing national law firms in liability actions.

Representative matters in which Jeremy has served as a key member include:

- Representing a for-profit educational institution against False Claims Act allegations in related actions brought by two former employees, resulting in a dismissal of all claims by after the Southern District of Florida granted Gibson Dunn's motions for summary judgment. Both summary judgment orders were subsequently affirmed on appeal by the Eleventh Circuit.
- Representing a for-profit educational institution against False Claims Act allegations premised on "phantom student" allegations, resulting in a dismissal of all claims after the District of Nevada granted Gibson Dunn's motion for summary judgment. The district court's grant of summary judgment was subsequently affirmed on appeal by the Ninth Circuit.
- Representing a for-profit educational institution against retaliation claims brought by a former employee brought pursuant to the California False Claims Act, with the court dismissing all claims based on Gibson Dunn's demurrer, a decision which was subsequently affirmed by a California Court of Appeal.
- Represented a Fortune 500 corporation and its subsidiaries in a mass tort suit brought by approximately 1,500 property owners and other individuals alleging property damages and personal injury claims based on allegations of vapor intrusion of petroleum hydrocarbons in housing development in Carson, California, including conducting discovery on individual plaintiffs and assisting with summary judgment motions and motions to exclude plaintiffs' experts. The case ultimately resulted in a favorable settlement after the exclusion of one of the plaintiffs' key experts.
- Representing an AmLaw 100 law firm against malpractice and breach of fiduciary duty claims brought by the third-party beneficiary of a trust, including preparing and arguing a demurrer in Los Angeles Superior Court that resulted in the dismissal of
